Toyota's jewel in Mindanao

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY—For the second, I "wandered" into what is the office of Toyota-Capagna de Oro, the company's Philippine branch, to see the people who make this car company's life in Cagayan de Oro.

In "Mindanao," the place is so far from the center of the island that it is considered to be a remote area. It is not even a city. I had a tough time getting to the office. The road is a dirt road, and the weather is hot and humid. I had to take a long drive to get to the office. The office is a small building with a sign that says "Toyota-Capagna de Oro".

And of course, two more people to meet here, too, to be able to get through the office. The office is a small building with a sign that says "Toyota-Capagna de Oro".

But I could not have done what I did without the help of Toyota-Capagna de Oro. The office is a small building with a sign that says "Toyota-Capagna de Oro".

Pipie laid to rest in Parañaque

By Margue Ordo

THE PHILIPPINE Daily Inquirer laid to rest its mascot Pipie "Tiger" this morning. Burial services of some publishers united to bid adieu to the long-time mascot of the paper.

"It's the passing of a body here, but for the press and the nation, it's a body that has been laid to rest," said Pipie's creator, Jose Luis, who is a lawyer at the Paranaque City Court.

BSP optimistic peso to average at 54-56 to $1

By Darin C. Sumlin

THE BANGKOK-based Philippine Star is optimistic that the peso would still average at 54-56 to a US dollar by year's end, especially once the presidential elections are over.

BSP Governor Robert S. Aquino said the monetary agency would seek to maintain the peso's value at 54-56 to the dollar over the rest of the year.

At January, the local currency averaged at 54.685, which he then led to 56.270-57.11 in February, leaving the peso closed at 56.270-57.11.

The BSP chief said even the foreign exchange market seemed to agree that the upside leaving the dollar was now limited. The weakest level for the peso was 56.35, which was in line of twice over the last two weeks (however, trading has been quiet over the last weekend).

"In fact, they see that there is greater risk of excessive peso depreciation," he said.

He said the "last dollar" rule is in the operating mechanism and the targeted variable-weighting down to 50% local currency.

"The intervention of 54-56 is still valid for now. It should improve in the second half. We feel this (current peso weakness) is temporary," he said.

The BSP chief also said the monetary institution would allow the peso to float more freely, especially now that the foreign central bank and the US Federal Reserve were expected to ease up their private liquidity.

Global inflation rate weakness, he said, there was no pressure for the BSP to tighten its monetary policy rate, which stood at 6.75 percent for borrowing and 5 percent for lending.

He said the benchmark 91-day treasury bill rate was likely to stay only slightly above the BSP's 6.75 percent policy rate.

Dollar financing for spot foreign exchange trading was also compared to the BSP's ongoing intention to crack down on banks' sources of liquidity.

Nevertheless, he stressed indicated that the BSP was not moving out of options and would be ready to intervene when necessary.

When the peso is last depressed, the central monetary institution either will dollarize or intervene in monetary tightening measures to reduce the peso's volatility that can be used to speculate in favor of the peso.

As for the foreign exchange rate, the BSP chief said he expected the peso to appreciate against the dollar by year's end. The peso should be trading at about 54-56 against the US dollar at year's end if the economy were not affected by political risks due to the May presidential elections.

As the country's balance of payments position improved a surplus of 10% in January, indicating more foreign exchange on hand, the BSP would prefer to see monetary policy rather than direct intervention.

The BSP chief said he expected the peso to appreciate against the dollar by year's end. The peso should be trading at about 54-56 against the US dollar at year's end if the economy were not affected by political risks due to the May presidential elections.

WHEN it comes to fast food, there suddenly are some stiff competitors. SpamJam Café is putting a twist upon its a family favorite.

"The idea is global cuisine with localized appeal," says entrepreneur Mely Aladilla, managing director of SpamJam Café System, Inc., which put up SpamJam Café together with PinoyBurgerHouse. "It's a new look at classic cuisine."
